0.2 Setting up the documents

We got the documents from blackboard. Also normal enron from the web.

0.2.1 Fix for windows:

Windows doesn't like the filenames used by enron. For normal enron, the files end with a dot, which is illegal in windows. Because of this, windows doesn't let you rename the file because in windows's eyes, the file doesn't exist, so we need to use a linux approach.

Use MSYS to change all filenames to have suffix 'txt' with the following command:

cd enron_folder
find . -type f -name . -exec bash -c 'mv "$1" "${1%.}.txt" _ {} \;

Additionally, in enron_short, the files are put in folders with the same name as the illegal files. We need to remove these folders as well. For this, we have created two scripts, `./rename_files.sh` and `./remove_dirs.sh`, which does this for us. This takes a lot of time to run however, even when they are multiprocessed (they are), so it is better to use linux instead.

Or there is a better way of doing it and we wasted a lot of time...

After fixing the data, we can read all the files recursively like this:

[3]: import os
def read_files_recursive(base):
    """Recursive function to read all files in a directory and all ↪subdirectories"""
    corpus = []
    paths = os.listdir(base)
    for path in paths:
        # If it is a directory, traverse by recursion:
        if os.path.isdir(base + path):
            new_corpus = read_files_recursive(base + path + "/")
            corpus.extend(new_corpus)
        # It is a file, READ IT:
        elif os.path.isfile(base + path):
            with open(base + path) as f:
                corpus.append({
                    'title': 'base_path + path',
                    'content': f.read()
        else:
            raise FileNotFoundError(f"The file '{base + path}' was not ↪recognized")
    return corpus
```

Or iteratively...

[4]: import os
from tqdm import tqdm
import codecs
def read_files(base_path):
    """
    An iterative version in case recursive doesn't work.
    Also, it has a counter, so... but seems to be much slower...
    """
    corpus = []
```

paths = os.listdir(base_path)
for path in tqdm(paths):
    # If it is a file, READ IT:
    if os.path.isfile(base_path + path):
        with open(base_path + path) as f:
            corpus.append({
                'title': base_path + path,
                'content': f.read()
    # If it is a dir, list it and add to paths
    else:
        new_paths = os.listdir(base_path + path)
        new_paths = [path + "/" + new_path for new_path in new_paths]
        paths.extend(new_paths)
return corpus

Second iterative function, for good measure
import fnmatch
def find(pattern, path):
    """Event better"""
    result = []
    for root, _, files in os.walk(path):
        for name in files:
            if fnmatch.fnmatch(name, pattern):
                result.append(os.path.join(root, name))
    corpus = []
    for path in tqdm(result):
        with codecs.open(path) as f:
            corpus.append({
                'title': path,
                'content': f.read()

Now let's actually read all the files

[5]: base = "./enron_short/maildir/"
     corpus = find("*.txt", base)
     print(f"Collection size: {len(corpus)}")

0.2.2 Indexing the documents

    # Bulk load into elasticsearch
    helpers.bulk(es, actions)

Initiate our own indexer:

indexer = CustomIndexer([doc['_source'] for doc in corpus])

Zero results for ElasticSearch. Nobody mentioned NTNU apparently.

We got one result however. Let's try without AND operators.

Ofc. 'Norwegian' is not mentioned, it is never mentioned...

Or is it?

end_time = time.time()
print(f"Elapsed {end_time - start_time}s\n")

start_time = time.time()
